A WINTER'S TAIL

The crisp snow drifted round the houses of Homer Alaska. The small fishing boats rocked as the waves rolled in and out sending ringing noises echoing through the town. The old church struck ten as Jason trudged down the street dreading the next long day of work. In the distance he heard a high pitch scream cutting through the silence. He instinctively ran down the narrow streets towards the sound. The cold winter air rushed past his ears as he careered through the town. When he neared where he thought the sound originated he noticed a woman slumped against a car and man crouched over her. Her neck in his mouth! Blood pumped out of the fatal wound zigzagging down her pale body. As Jason stepped back in fear the man looked up, his glossy black hair fell over his face shielding it from view. His jeans were covered in blood and he had a long leather jacket strapped tightly round his waist. The man rose sending Jason stumbling back in fear. As the "man" turned Jason saw a smile grow on his face before bolting down the road into the fog.

Fitz and Simmons were slumped lazily on the lab counter watching planet of the apes. It was the first time they relaxed together since Fitz returned from the alien planet without Will. They were in a deep discussion about the modeling of the apes when the lab doors opened and Daisy walked in.

"Suspected inhuman murderer in Homer Alaska, wheels up in ten." Commanded Daisy as she walked over to the tv and turned it off.

Fitz gave a disgruntled moan but Daisy ignored him and pushed them both off the counter with her powers.

"Skye I really don't think you should use your powers in that way."

Simmons moaned as both the scientists started packing their things.

"Number one Daisy not Skye, number two Jiaying said the inhumans were given powers for a reason, and my reason was to get FitzSimmons off desks and pack." Protested Daisy before turning and walking out of the lab door.
